SUMMER

ACTIVITIES
GUIDE
2019/2020

Mayor's Message

With the sun out, the weather warming up and those extra hours of sunlight at the end of the day, summer is a great time in our city.

And when you factor in Christmas and New Year celebrations, and some quality sporting and community events planned, there will be plenty happening in and around Devonport over the next three months. So, my advice is – get out and amongst it!

Summer will be kicked off with the annual Devonport Christmas Parade on Friday, 6 December at 6.30 p.m. This year's parade will traverse a route taking in James Street, Victoria Parade, Bluff Road and Clements Street and there will be a Christmas market on the corner of Bluff Road and Clements Street between 4 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Carols by Candlelight will be held at the Devonport Oval on Sunday, 8 December from 7.30 p.m.

The Devonport Carnival – featuring cycling, running and woodchopping - will return to its traditional two-day format on 29 and 30 December at the Devonport Oval.

And the following night the SkyFire New Year's Eve event will be centred on Aitkenhead Point and land surrounding the Bass Strait Maritime Centre.

Devonport will hold its Australia Day Citizenship Awards on Sunday, 26 January at the paranple convention centre from 10 a.m.

There are a host of other events and activities contained in this guide, so it will not be too hard to find something which appeals to you.

*Councillor Annette Rockliff,
Mayor of Devonport*

Rust, Resin and Reality Darryl Rogers

Image: Darryl Rogers, Dead Parrot, 2019, found object assemblage; cage, drone, rust, mirror

Impermanence, permanence, transience and the timeless are symbolised in a series of 3D works where rust and resin are used as the primary sculptural medium. As a sort of physical manifestation of temporal extremes, these two materials in concert with assemblage, text and other detritus explore aspects of quantum physics, the metaphysical and other entangled bits of informed reality.

Olly Read: Serene and Menacing

Poetic tensions inherent in the conscious experience of physical bodies

Image: Olly Read, I touch myself suspended skin, 2019, soft sculpture (wood, fabric, fishing line, tacks, metal brackets).

Serene and Menacing consists of material driven multimedia sculptural and video works exploring the metamorphic nature of flesh as being continually simultaneously formed, unformed, and deformed. Looking to tensions as reflecting the inherent poetic experience we have of our own bodies.

Devonport LIVING CITY Waterfront Park Completion late 2021

LIVING CITY is more than just buildings, it is also about new places, new experiences and new events.

The new Waterfront Park will result in more public open green space than currently existing in the CBD, with the parkland extending across Formby Road into the area, adjacent to northern Rooke Street once occupied by commercial buildings.

The Park will be intersected with three distinct promenades, two at ground level and one elevated. These promenades will physically and visually draw people from the City to the river.

The elevated walkway will be a feature of the Park extending over Formby Road, the rail line and out over the river edge. Designed to replicate a traditional jetty or pier, the walkway will provide a public boundary to the southern edge of the park and be an exciting viewing point for shipping activity.

Roundhouse Park will receive a substantial upgrade, with the existing walkway/cycle path remaining connected to the rest of the Mersey River walk.

A unique nature-based playspace will be located between the railway line and the Mersey River, at the end of the elevated promenade. The Playspace will be complemented by an adjacent barbecue area with public facilities.

A rotunda will be constructed, inspired by the roundhouse that once stood in this park, bearing the colour scheme of the current day trains that pass by.

Existing major events will continue within the Park once completed, with additional features and services to improve existing and new community events

Modern Sublime

Photographs from the Robinson Collection

Traditionally, the 'sublime' has referred to feelings of awe inspired by nature. However, in the 20th century, the notion of the industrial sublime emerged – the feeling of awe induced by machines, technology and progress. Modern Sublime explores this idea, with focus on the Edgell factory. Devonport was once the largest processor of peas in Tasmania, this playing a vital role in the economy of North West Tasmania. This exhibition traces the journey of the humble pea from harvest, to factory and store, through images which celebrate technology, machinery and production.

Finding Place - Cheryl Sims

Little Gallery Emerging Artists Program

Cheryl Sims' childhood was like that many other Tasmanian families from the North West Coast; they fought and struggled to keep families together. Encaustics is the medium that best expresses the journey Sims is now taking, when finally finding contentment in the place she calls home.

Life Lines (Working Title) June Wilson

Little Gallery Emerging Artists Program

The exhibition Life Lines is a series of pastel portraits that pay homage to an underrepresented group - women of diverse cultural back grounds. The works are a celebration of the subjects' heritage, resilience and uniqueness as well as the 300-year-old tradition of pastel portraiture.

Beyond Sight

a sensory art exhibition

A multi-sensory exhibition in which visitors can explore the artworks through touch, sound, smell, sight and imagination.

Katrin Terton's evocative, interactive and immersive experience contemplates inclusion of the broadest audience by making her works meaningfully accessible to people of all ages and abilities with particular regard to people with low or no vision. The exhibition challenges the prevailing paradigm of inclusion by revealing that the experience of those with impairments is both valid and rich, then including other members of the audience in that appreciation. This not only levels the playing field for participation, it also reminds the whole audience of the benefit of using all of their available senses to understand their world.
